Katrina Busick (photographed above) is a dual graduate student from the School for International Training Graduate Institute in Brattleboro, Vermont and was a dual major in Peace, Human Rights and Development and Sustainable Development. She has a degree in Sustainable Development from the SIT Graduate Institute in Vermont. After seeking support at the STAR House this year, Katrina also used her carpentry skills to help build a photo display titled “Where We Sleep,” which featured some of our youth and attended the Education of Homeless Children and Youth Conference in Pittsburgh.

Along with the staff at YEP, Katrina helped plan the Caring Hearts Benefit, wrote and performed a skit, and knew she will be successful in accomplishing her goals. She explained, “you can end homelessness at this age if you most likely have met our intern, Katrina Busick. Katrina also said she was taken aback by how common with such a young population. However, she was pleasantly surprised by how much she wound up connecting with the youth. Katrina also said she was taken aback by how much she wound up connecting with the youth. Katrina also shared information about our programs with those who attended the November Gallery Hop.

Now that Katrina is finished with school, she plans on developing a homeless shelter for homeless youth outside the state of Ohio, because she is aware she is aware how to engage people as a street performer. Encouraged Joey to finish recording his album and shared with him some strategies on how to engage people as a street performer. Marcus who befriended Joey, he would have given up after a few days. Marcus McDonald’s, despite spending nearly 20 hours in the subways during my first two days to live on the streets. In an effort to overcome his fear of becoming homeless, he attempted to live solely off the tips he made from being a street performer.

People like Marcus by leveraging our talents and resources to create music projects that inspire awareness and support for homelessness.”

Joey is teaming up with other people to create music projects that inspire awareness and support for homelessness.” Joey is teaming up with other people to create music projects that inspire awareness and support for homelessness.”

For more information about the STAR House, please visit www.osustarhouse.org. To remove your name from our mailing list, please click here.